Re: Suitability of natural still mineral water "Akvilė" for the preparation of infant food

State food and veterinary service examined your written request No 5, dating 12-11-2020 to issue an information letter on suitability of natural still mineral water "Akvilė" for the preparation of infant food and additional information which was presented by an application No. 6, dating 17-12-2020 and No.7, dating 05-01-2021. State food and veterinary service approves that according to the performed laboratory test data of the year 2019-2020 labelling of natural mineral water "Akvilė" as "Suitable for the preparation of infant food" meets Lithuanian hygiene standards HN 28:2003 "Requirements for the use and marketing of natural mineral water and spring water" approved by the Minister of Health of the Republic of Lithuania, order No. V – 758, dating the 23rd of December, 2003 "Regarding Lithuanian hygiene standards HN 28:2003,"Requirements for the use and marketing of natural mineral water and spring water" Appendix 3, "Characteristics and criteria of natural mineral" line 13("Suitable for the preparation of infant food") established requirements.

State food and veterinary service notes that on the 28th January, 2002 European Parliament and Council Regulation (EC) No. 178/2002, establishing the general principles and requirements of food legislation, establishing the European Food Safety Authority and establishing procedures related to food safety issues, Article 17(1) establishes that food business operators in all stages of production, processing and distribution related to the businesses under their control ensures that the food meets the requirements of the laws governing food products related to their activities and verifies these requirements are complied with.
